

Conclusion:

Group 0 are working single parent family with stability with steady jobs and kids education, being previous house owners, yet doesn't have access to clean water, and be in the least favorable housing situation. Yet have the most positive attitude toward life and future. They will be successful if they are provided with new houses and opportunities.

Group2 is the least qualified for new houses: They have relatively stable family life (married or with common law partners and kids go to school) with better living condition (more space to live comfortably, own land tents are on), living in the village for a long time and not willing to move for new house.

Group1 is not in the worst housing situation, yet have the highest unemployment rate among family members and kids education is low. They have pessimistic attitude toward life and future in general. They will not be as successful as Group 0 if provided housing and other forms of assistance will be appropriate for them.
